LA TOUR DE NESLE and NICK OF THE WOODS. Opening for the Defence in the Anti-Rapid Transit Suits.

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF THE RAPID TRANSIT ACTS.

A Dentist's Bill Against Henry Ward Beecher.

Love Transferred from the Galley to the Cabin.

in the suit brought against it by the Sixth Avenue Rallroad, being tried before Judge Sedgwick in Specia made the opening. He said that the present action evidently had been brought to restrain the people from enjoying rapid transit over the best route; there was ne question as to the necessity of rapid transit in this city. Every scheme had been thwarted in the Legislature through the influence of the horse car companies. They had now learned that there was one kind of rapid transit to which they were fully committed, the magic carpet of the oriental imagination. He dwelt at length upon the power of the defendant to build elevated road upon the plan proposed. He did not doem it necessary to discuss the utility of the Gilbert Elevated Railway plan. He reviewed the various acts of legislation in regard to it, showing how, in 1871, an attempt was made to get a charter for the Gil-bert Elevated Atmospheric Railroad, and how this scheme failed because it did not enlist the confidence of the capitalists. He went on to state that a year and the capitalists. He went on to state that a year later various parties interested in rapid transit in this city taiked upon the subject with Mr. Gilbert and their willingness to assist him in obtaining a franchise if he could perfect a plan by which cars could be run in the open air by steam. The present pian was, therefore, effected after great labor, and a bill passed by the Legislature incorporating the Gilbert improved Elevated Railway. He referred to the authority of the Legislature over the streets of the city, in which regard he claimed it had supreme control. Having sited various anthorities upon this point he insisted that the Legislature might at any time change one kind of public use of the street to another use of the street. He next spoke of the street to another use of the street. He next spoke of the constitutionality of the rapid transit act, and in conclusion insisted that the purpose in view by the Gilbert Improved Elevated Railroad Company was to enjoy the rights of its franchise so as to do the least possible injury to other parties. When he had finished his opening, Patrick Burns, a member of the Legislature in 1872 was called as the first witness for the defence. He stated that the plan submitted to the Legislature did not contemplate the propulsion of cars by the pneumatic method, but by steam in the open air.

In the suit of the Ninth Avenue Railroad against the Greenwich Elevated Railroad Company, being tried before Judge Van Hoesen, of the Court of Common Pleas, Mr. A. J. Vanderpoel opened the case yesterday on behalf of the defendants. He made a lengthy and cogent argument. After reviewing the decisions of Chief Justice Daly and the General Torm upon the Patton case, he showed how the road, even with a five years' restriction, was not deburred by any act of the Legislature in carrying to a completion its reasonable plans. He spoke of the long drawn out testimony presented on the part of the planning as every mune. Another witness testified that there were 1,000 accidents a day, wh

LENRY WARD BEECHER It is very rarely that the great pastor of Plymouth church makes his appearance in a court outside the City of Churches. In Supreme Court, Ctrouit, held by Judge of Churches. In Supreme Court, Circuit, held by Judge Westbrook, he put in an appearance, however, yesterday, the occasion being his compulsory resistance of a suit brought by Solomon S. Skinner, a dentist, to recover payment for two sets of false teeth alleged to have been furnished by the plaintiff to Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher and one set to Dr. Lyman Beecher, some twenty-five years ago. Mrs. Beecher was also present in court. ExJudge Busteed appeared for Mr. Skinner and Mr. John S. Hill for Mr. Beecher. Judge Busteed made one of his characteristic openings, which kept the court room convuised, and then called the plaintiff, who told his side of the story.

Henry Ward Beecher was then called by Judge Busteed. He litted the right hand, indicating that he would be sworn as he was on the scandal trial. He was very cool and good humored, and got up several good laughs, while the counsel spoke at the top of his voice, gesticulated, and fixed terrible looks upon the witness.

Q. How long ago was it since Mrs. Beecher had no witness.

Q. How long ago was it since Mrs. Beecher had no teeth? A. I couldn't locate it; but I know that very early she was obliged to rely on an auxiliary set. (Laughter.)

Q. How many false sets had she? A. I don't know what they were made of.

Q. They might be lead or turf? A. They might for all I know—(laughter)—I did not pay Skinner that I

Q They might be lead or turf? A. They might for all I know—(laughter)—I did not pay Skinner that I know of; I know of nothing about teeth for my father, except Skinner's demand; I don't know what I said to him; I got rid of him as quick as I could, because he wes drunk. (Laughter.)
Q Ob, you say he was drunk? A. He had all the appearance of it.
Q Furiously)—Ob, he had the appearance? Now, was he drunk, or was it only the appearance? A. (Without a smile)—Well if I was in that state I should have been drunk. (Roars of iaughter.)
Q Were you ever in that state? A. Never.
Q Did you ever expect to be here? Mr. Hill objected, and Judge Busteed "took it all back."
Judge Westbrook promptly dismissed the case, as, on the piaintiff's own suowing, the goods were furnished twenty years ago.
It was amusing, while the counsel was reading denunciations of statute of limitation defences, to see the witness coully occupied reading a book, and, apparently, taking no notice of all the terrible things shouted into his ear.

A ROMANCE OF THE SEA. A novel case, involving the characters of a sea cap ain and a young girl, came up before United States Commissioner Osborn yesterday for adjudication. From the testimony taken in the case it appears that Frank Geardis, steward of the American beig Wanburn, of which Joseph Spencer is captain, took on board the vessel, while lying in the port of Liverpool, a young girl named Harriet Miles, whom he introduced as his wife, the captain assenting on condition that the steward should pay Harriet's passage and board to this port, for which the vessel sailed on the 22d of March last for which the vessel sailed on the 22d of March last. The parties were, in fact, not married, although it was arranged that the ceremony should be periormed on their arrival here. The pre-nuptial honeymoon did not continue long, Harriet becoming tired of her protector, the steward, and transierring her allegiance to the captain. The vessel arrived at Matanzaa, Cuba, after a voyage of thirty-eight days, when Miss Miles left the galley for the cabin, which she continued to occupy till the arrival of the vessel at this port. During this time Harriet was boss, fore and sit, as one of the sailors phrased it, and peremptorily scouted all the steward's advances and pleages of matrimony which he vowed with frequent protestations to fallil whomever they should arrive in port. The climax which brought the case into court was reached when, on the crew being paid off in the port a lew days ago, the captain tendered Geardis his wages, deducting the girl's passage and board money and about $10 for a lakey comb, a belt, a pair of gloves, a parasol and a veil, which the captain themelf had presented to her. This unexpected treatment infamed the passion of the steward, he looking upon it as adding injury to insult, and he indignantly refused to receive his wages with any such deductions. He thereupon brought the case before the Commissioner, Mr. Osborn recommended a compromise and reprimanded Geardis for taking a woman on board the vessel under faise representations. apot a short time after the bloody deed, we glean the intelligence that Ike Cox, a notorious, treacherous and dangerous character, was shot and killed in that village on Wednesday night, the 31st ult.

The circumstances that led to the commission of this sanguinary deed are substantially as follows:—

It seems that the whole neighborhood of Port Hudson were in constant dread of this man Cox, on account of his having commuted some foul and atrocious murders some time since in that immediate section, and had by the leniency of packed and bribed juries evaded the just penalty of the law. That, emboldened by his success, he had continued to follow his dark, and consurable course until his name had become a perfect symbol of awa and terror to the citizens of the tamed interesticement. His daily and nightly work was but one of blood and violation of law. He thought it but his daily to flog, shoot and stab people wherever he met them; ready at all times from the sightest cause to wany out a revolver and fire. By this means he halmade himself intolerable and unnearable to the citizens, so that driven to the last extremity they armed themself was an advove him from the town.

From that time up to a lew days ago he has been tradging about from one parish to another, still pursuing he vol ways. We believe that in the parish of a countrie of the parish but and dangerously wounded a countrie of the proper. Not so, however, as was afterward proved. No scener had his presence in the parish bed made known to the Sheriff than that implied the account of the parish days ago he has been tradiging and out daying the law.

In modulately after he became involved in a difficulty with some Spaniards, or Italians, in Donaldaowville, we well-we, in which aftray he shot and aspirar evening and evading the law.
